Did You Know?

Benign prostatic hyperplasia affects about 50 percent of men between the ages of 51 and 60 and up to 90 percent of men older than 80. Men with the following factors are more likely to develop benign prostatic hyperplasia (BPH):

- age 40 years and older
- lack of physical exercise
- erectile dysfunction
- family history of benign prostatic hyperplasia
- abdominal obesity
- medical conditions such as obesity, heart and circulatory disease and type 2 diabetes

Signs and symptoms of BPH start when the enlarged prostate puts pressure on the urethra and bladder. This can narrow (constrict) or block the urethra, which can cause changes in bladder habits such as the following lower urinary tract symptoms:

- difficulty passing urine
- blood in the urine
- more frequent urination especially at night
- a strong or sudden urge to urinate (urinary urgency)
- weak or slow urine stream
- being unable to empty the bladder completely, which can lead to urinary tract infections and bladder stones
- difficulty starting the urine stream (straining)
- difficulty controlling the bladder (incontinence), which can cause urine to leak and dribble
